Hungry, Lucius buys himself some food, but Pythius, judging the food bad, stops him from eating it. Penniless, he returns to Milo's house, where he fares no better.

tum Milo uxorem iussit hospitem ad thermas ducere. Lucius autem illuc ire noluit. domo egressus ad forum ivit ut cibum emeret. ubi pisces pulchros conspexit, magno pretio emit. dum e foro discredit, amicus, Pythius nomine, quem multos annos non viderat, magna voce eum salutavit. Pythius dixit se curam fori mercatorumque habere. piscibus visis, clamavit: 'hi pisces pessimi sunt; quantum pecuniae dedisti?' postquam Lucius respondit, Pythius eum ad mercatorem qui pisces vendiderat reduxit; quem vehementer vituperavit. tum pisces e manibus Lucii raptos ad terram deiecit. mercatori 'hoc modo' inquit 'eos punire soleo qui malam mercem vendunt.' hoc dicto abiit.

Lucius attonitus pisces in terra iacentes spectavit: iam neque pecuniam neque cenam habebat. nihil aliud facere potuit nisi domum Milonis redire. ibi quamquam dormire conabatur, Milo eum non modo ad cenam arcessivit sed etiam tot de vita rogavit ut Lucius nihil consumere posset priusquam servi cibum removissent.

6 sororis suae, comitem cum eis misit.
7 respondo Apollinis audito, duo iuvenes deum rogaverunt uter Romae rex

9 Romae summam habiturum esse. deinde fratres ad matrem suam quam
10 celerrime festinaverunt ut oraculo parerent. sed Brutus ad terram cecidit et
